Kashmir: [Secretary General Thant fears there is serious danger of a complete breakdown of the 1949 cease-fire agreement in Kashmir.]

[Thant told Ambassador Goldberg on 24 August that he believes the small UN observer group in Kashmir is "impotent" to deal with the present situation under its existing mandate. He thinks he may have to recommend to the Security Council that the group be either withdrawn or strengthened.]

[In Kashmir itself Indian officials are confident that they have now pinpointed the main guerrilla concentrations. On the cease-fire line Indian forces have reportedly penetrated more deeply into Azad Kashmir in the Tithwal area.]

[Farther south, at the terminus of the cease-fire line near Manawwar, Pakistan claims to have captured a large number of Indian soldiers engaged in a foray across the line on 24 August.]

Dominican Republic: The negative reaction of armed forces leaders to the revised OAS proposals will further delay a settlement.

Top military leaders continue to favor signing the original act drawn up by the OAS Committee but feel the changes in it benefit the rebels. The officers charge that maintaining the rebel zone even for a limited time and assigning Caamano the job of disarming his followers would still leave the country with two governments.

The military apparently are also losing confidence in Hector Garcia Godoy. They hint that he has made private commitments to the rebels which would damage the armed forces' interests. Although there is no evidence supporting the allegation, the rebels' willingness to allow the provisional president to resolve outstanding armed forces issues has aroused suspicions.

The present attitude of top military leaders is partly the result of pressure from subordinates, some of whom are concerned by Garcia Godoy's past criticism of the military. To regain their confidence Garcia Godoy may have to limit his freedom to deal with the armed forces. He has, for example, indicated to US officials that he might not be able to name a civilian as minister of armed forces, and he may have to assure the military that he will not do so.

NOTES

Greece: [Premier Tsirimokos' chances for parliamentary approval are dim as a result of progressive party leader Markezinis' decision to withhold his support from the new government. Tsirimokos must now concentrate his efforts on persuading more Center Union deputies to defect from Papandreou. The vote of confidence may not come until Monday.]
